Disability Confident

Health Adjustment Passport

Access To Work

What is the Disability Confident Scheme and how can it help?

Disability Confident is creating a movement of change, encouraging employers to think differently about disability and take action to improve how they attract, recruit, retain and develop disabled people and those with long term health conditions.

Disability Confident organisations play a leading role in changing attitudes for the better. They're changing behaviour and cultures in their own businesses, networks and communities, and reaping the benefits of inclusive recruitment practices.

With the government having already recently hit its target set in 2017 to get more than 1 million more disabled people in work by 2027, the scheme remains key to decreasing the disability employment gap.

Disability Confident

The DC scheme was developed by employers and disabled people's representatives to make it rigorous but easily accessible – particularly for smaller businesses.

There are 3 levels which are designed to support businesses on their Disability Confident journey.

The 3 levels are:

- Disability Confident Committed (Level 1)
- Disability Confident Employer (Level 2)
- Disability Confident Leader (Level 3)

Each level must be completed before the employer moves onto the next stage.

Disability Confident

To be recognised as Disability Confident Committed, employers must agree to the Disability Confident commitments and identify at least one action that they'll carry out to make a difference for disabled people.

The commitments are:

- inclusive and accessible recruitment
- communicating vacancies
- offering an interview to disabled people
- providing reasonable adjustments
- supporting existing employees

The activities include (the business must identify at least one):

- work experience
- work trials
- paid employment
- apprenticeships
- job shadowing
- traineeships
- internships
- student placements
- sector-based work academy placements

Positive disclosure of your health or disability to an Employer

You do not need to tell a prospective employer about your disability or condition and by law, they are not allowed to ask you about it, except in some very limited circumstances. An employer can only put things in place to support you, using the information you give them. However, if you do not disclose anything at all, they may not be able to put anything in place to make the application and interview process easier, and in turn, give you the best chance of success.

Welcoming Wellbeing in Business

Why caring for your employees- and being an inclusive employer- is important

Making a business case for wellbeing & inclusivity: what do the numbers tell us?

1 in 5

People aged 16-64 are 'economically inactive'

Out of that, just over 1
in 4

Are inactive due to long term ill health.

Because of this, only 42%

Of businesses are working at full capacity, with the majority expressing difficulties with recruitment in our Quarterly Economic Survey.

Despite this, only 16%

Of employers have specific initiatives or workplace adjustments to employ disabled people (the most likely being public sector or charities).

Benefits of inclusivity & wellbeing

- Enhance your talent pool. Tap into a job market of people who are eager to work and contribute to an effective work environment
- Retain staff for longer. Support staff so that lack of accessibility doesn't prevent them from working.
- Reduce staff absence. Work with employees to understand their
- Champion diversity. We know from speaking to members there's a huge appetite to hire people from all backgrounds from businesses in the region, but many aren't aware of the support available to achieve this.

Approaching wellbeing & inclusivity

- Holistic approach- Businesses have to recognise that approaches to inclusivity aren't fixed with singular approaches to accessibility or wellbeing.
- Don't be afraid to learn- Utilise external expertise where necessary, with the goal of continuously improving your own approach to an inclusive workplace.
- Understand people's needs- this goes beyond the physical adjustments that might be put in place
- Overarching message: don't stop at policy changes, make cultural changes too.

What we're doing as a Chamber

- Policy engagement via the Chamber network around occupational health
- Working with providers of employment support to highlight opportunities such as Access to Work
- Campaigned on behalf of our members for further employment support
- Feeding into the British Chamber of Commerce's new Workplace Equity Commission
